There are at least one million different species of insects in the world, and every one of them has a story.

Ace Lacewing, Bug Detective, has seen it all, but the goings on at the Six Legs Amusement Park is enough to give any exoskeleton the shivers. A mysterious theft, carpenter ants on strike, the Termite Tower of Terror, and a weevil with paternal instincts—something's making Ace's antennae twitch. When Scratch Murphy's flea bag full of money is stolen and he's hit on the head, the suspects are crawling out of the woodwork. Ace is on the case and the whole place is buzzing with excitement.

Action packed and full of noirish puns, this second Ace Lacewing mystery will have the little larvae flying through the pages to see whodunit and searching out the hilarious details in the illustrations.

David Biedrzycki is the author and illustrator of Ace Lacewing: Bug Detective, an IRA Notable Book. He has illustrated several books written by Jerry Pallotta, including Who Will Help Santa This Year? (Scholastic), Underwater Counting: Even Numbers and Dory Story. David lives in Medfield, Massachusetts.
