How do you say “grandma” in Vietnamese?

Beautiful photographs tell the story in this book that celebrates the relationship between grandparents and children around the world. With simple text, Our Grandparents explores the universality of this special bond. Readers—adults and children alike—will learn the different ways grandparents and children from all cultures play and explore. They will discover that every language has its own word for “grandma” and “grandpa.”

It is clear in these vibrant scenes that at the root of this intergenerational relationship exists love. The book also includes a touching foreword by Archbishop Desmond Tutu, as well as suggestions of activities that children can share with their grandparents.

A portion of the proceeds from the sale of this book helps support The Global Fund for Children’s grant-making toward community-based projects benefiting children around the world.

Maya Ajmera is the founder and president of The Global Fund for Children. She is the co-author of several Global Fund for Children books, including Faith and Children from Australia to Zimbabwe. To learn more about The Global Fund for Children, visit www.globalfundforchildren.org.

Sheila Kinkade is a writer and communications consultant who works to help nonprofit organizations tell their stories. She is the author of My Family, among other books.

Cynthia Pon is the director of The Global Fund for Children and the co-author of Faith.
